Currently much of our lab space occupies a prep room abandoned by Chemistry over a decade ago. There is a nonfunctional refrigerator growing some sort of organism, equipment we can and cannot identify, and a lot of dust and disorder. This space has needed to be updated and maintained for years, but nevertheless has functioned to grow a thriving program. It looks like the messy garage of Microsoft or Apple or Google lore. Unfortunately, although this look has a certain kitschy appeal, it is certainly not the glossy structure that many students have come to expect from those companies now, and, as we have grown to what is now the largest community college program in the county, it has become wholly inadequate to the point of embarrassment. So much so that when the Board and District visited, the tour guide passed off the CADD department as engineering because it looked so much nicer. In addition to this, there is one group that this is disproportionately repelled by this space: women. In an informal survey of random students, women were twice as likely as men to find this room and its adjacent classroom visually unwelcoming. As the group with the largest gap between college and program representation, this is a huge and disappointing problem.

Q6 Estimated Cost:

We really just need space to run a lab class in where we can store things in some sort of back room. As long as there are tables and electrical outlets, we probably would not even need renovations.

Provided details::

Engineering has more than double in size and more than tripled our lab offerings but we have the same terrible, small, messy space that students can barely fit into to get to our 3D printers. It's not very safe or inviting currently and we have no one that can run it who doesn't keep needing to leave to teach a class.
