Valerie Peterson: A Key to Student Success

Walk into the office of Disabled Students Programs and Services at Cuyamaca College and Valerie Peterson is one of the first people you'll see. The DSPS specialist works with students, faculty and staff to make sure that students with disabilities are being provided the accommodations to which there are entitled and deserve. "We are here to do all we can for DSPS students to succeed and meet their educational goals," Valerie said. "We don't want them to come here and be disappointed. We don't want to set them up for failure. We want to set them up for success."

People with disabilities are the nation's largest minority, and anyone can join at any time. DSPS provides support services, specialized instruction, and academic accommodations to students with disabilities so that they can participate as fully and benefit as equitably from the college experience as their non-disabled peers.

Valerie was born and raised in Lemon Grove, graduated from Patrick Henry High School in San Diego, and attended both Grossmont and Cuyamaca colleges before transferring to San Diego State, where she earned a bachelor's degree in liberal students with an emphasis in special education.

The door to her career, though, opened while she was attending Grossmont College and Valerie began working in the DSPS office there to help fund her education. That was back in 2005. When a full time position opened up at Cuyamaca College in 2013, Valerie applied and was hired for the job. "It's like a family here," she said of Cuyamaca College. "I've met some really great people in the past 2 ½ years and I've seen some great initiatives that have been implemented. And everything is done for the benefit of the students."

When she's not working, Valerie likes traveling with her husband, a La Mesa Realtor, reading and photography.
